She is 77 and does not know it, but she is in very, very good health. When we arrived, we went to see her. It was so nice, and a little bit sad, to know that it would be our first reunion in a few months. I am ashamed to say that I love her and miss her very much, and I still can't believe that she is so old. But it was sad also to be aware of how much we all had aged. It was also very nice to see that she hadn't changed much, that she still has her sense of humor, a great one at that! I hope that I will be around when she is older and I will remember how sweet she is. It is so good to see all her achievements, how many children she had, how many grandchildren, how well she took care of the family, the house, the garden... She was a born farmer's wife, there is no doubt. She really had all she needed. And yet, she seemed to have hardly any regrets. We had dinner in her garden. With her, the food tasted so great, even to me, who barely can eat anymore. And then we went for coffee, and it was like old times. She just loved chatting with us, sharing her memories, she asked all kinds of questions about my husband and me. She still remembers a lot and listens carefully, she doesn't miss much. A few days later, we dropped by another relative's house. This old woman also lives alone. She is much, much older. She reminds me a lot of my grandmother. A lot of people think that she is very rich, but that is not the case. She has some little money, and that is all. She lived her life well, though. She married her first love. She lived it like a queen. 25 comments: Interesting post Nellie. Yes, food does taste so wonderful when you live in the country. I've always wanted to move back to the country, just to have the chance to experience it. Maybe
